IDLEWILD

What is claimed to be the greatest airport in the world is under construction in the meadows at Idlewild in New York City. Its cost will be in the neighborhood of 71 millions and when completed will . . .

Have 40 hangars to accommodate airline aircraft and maintenance facilities,

Have provision for the parking of 30,000 automobiles for the 40,000 personnel who will be employed full time,

Offer runways for take-off and landing 200 ft. in width, totaling 9 miles in length,

Accommodate aircraft weighing up to 150 tons,

Include a total land area of 4,527 acres,

Contain 20 miles of surface roadway for arterial and service use,

Have an adequate marine basin with a seaway of 15,000 ft. in length,

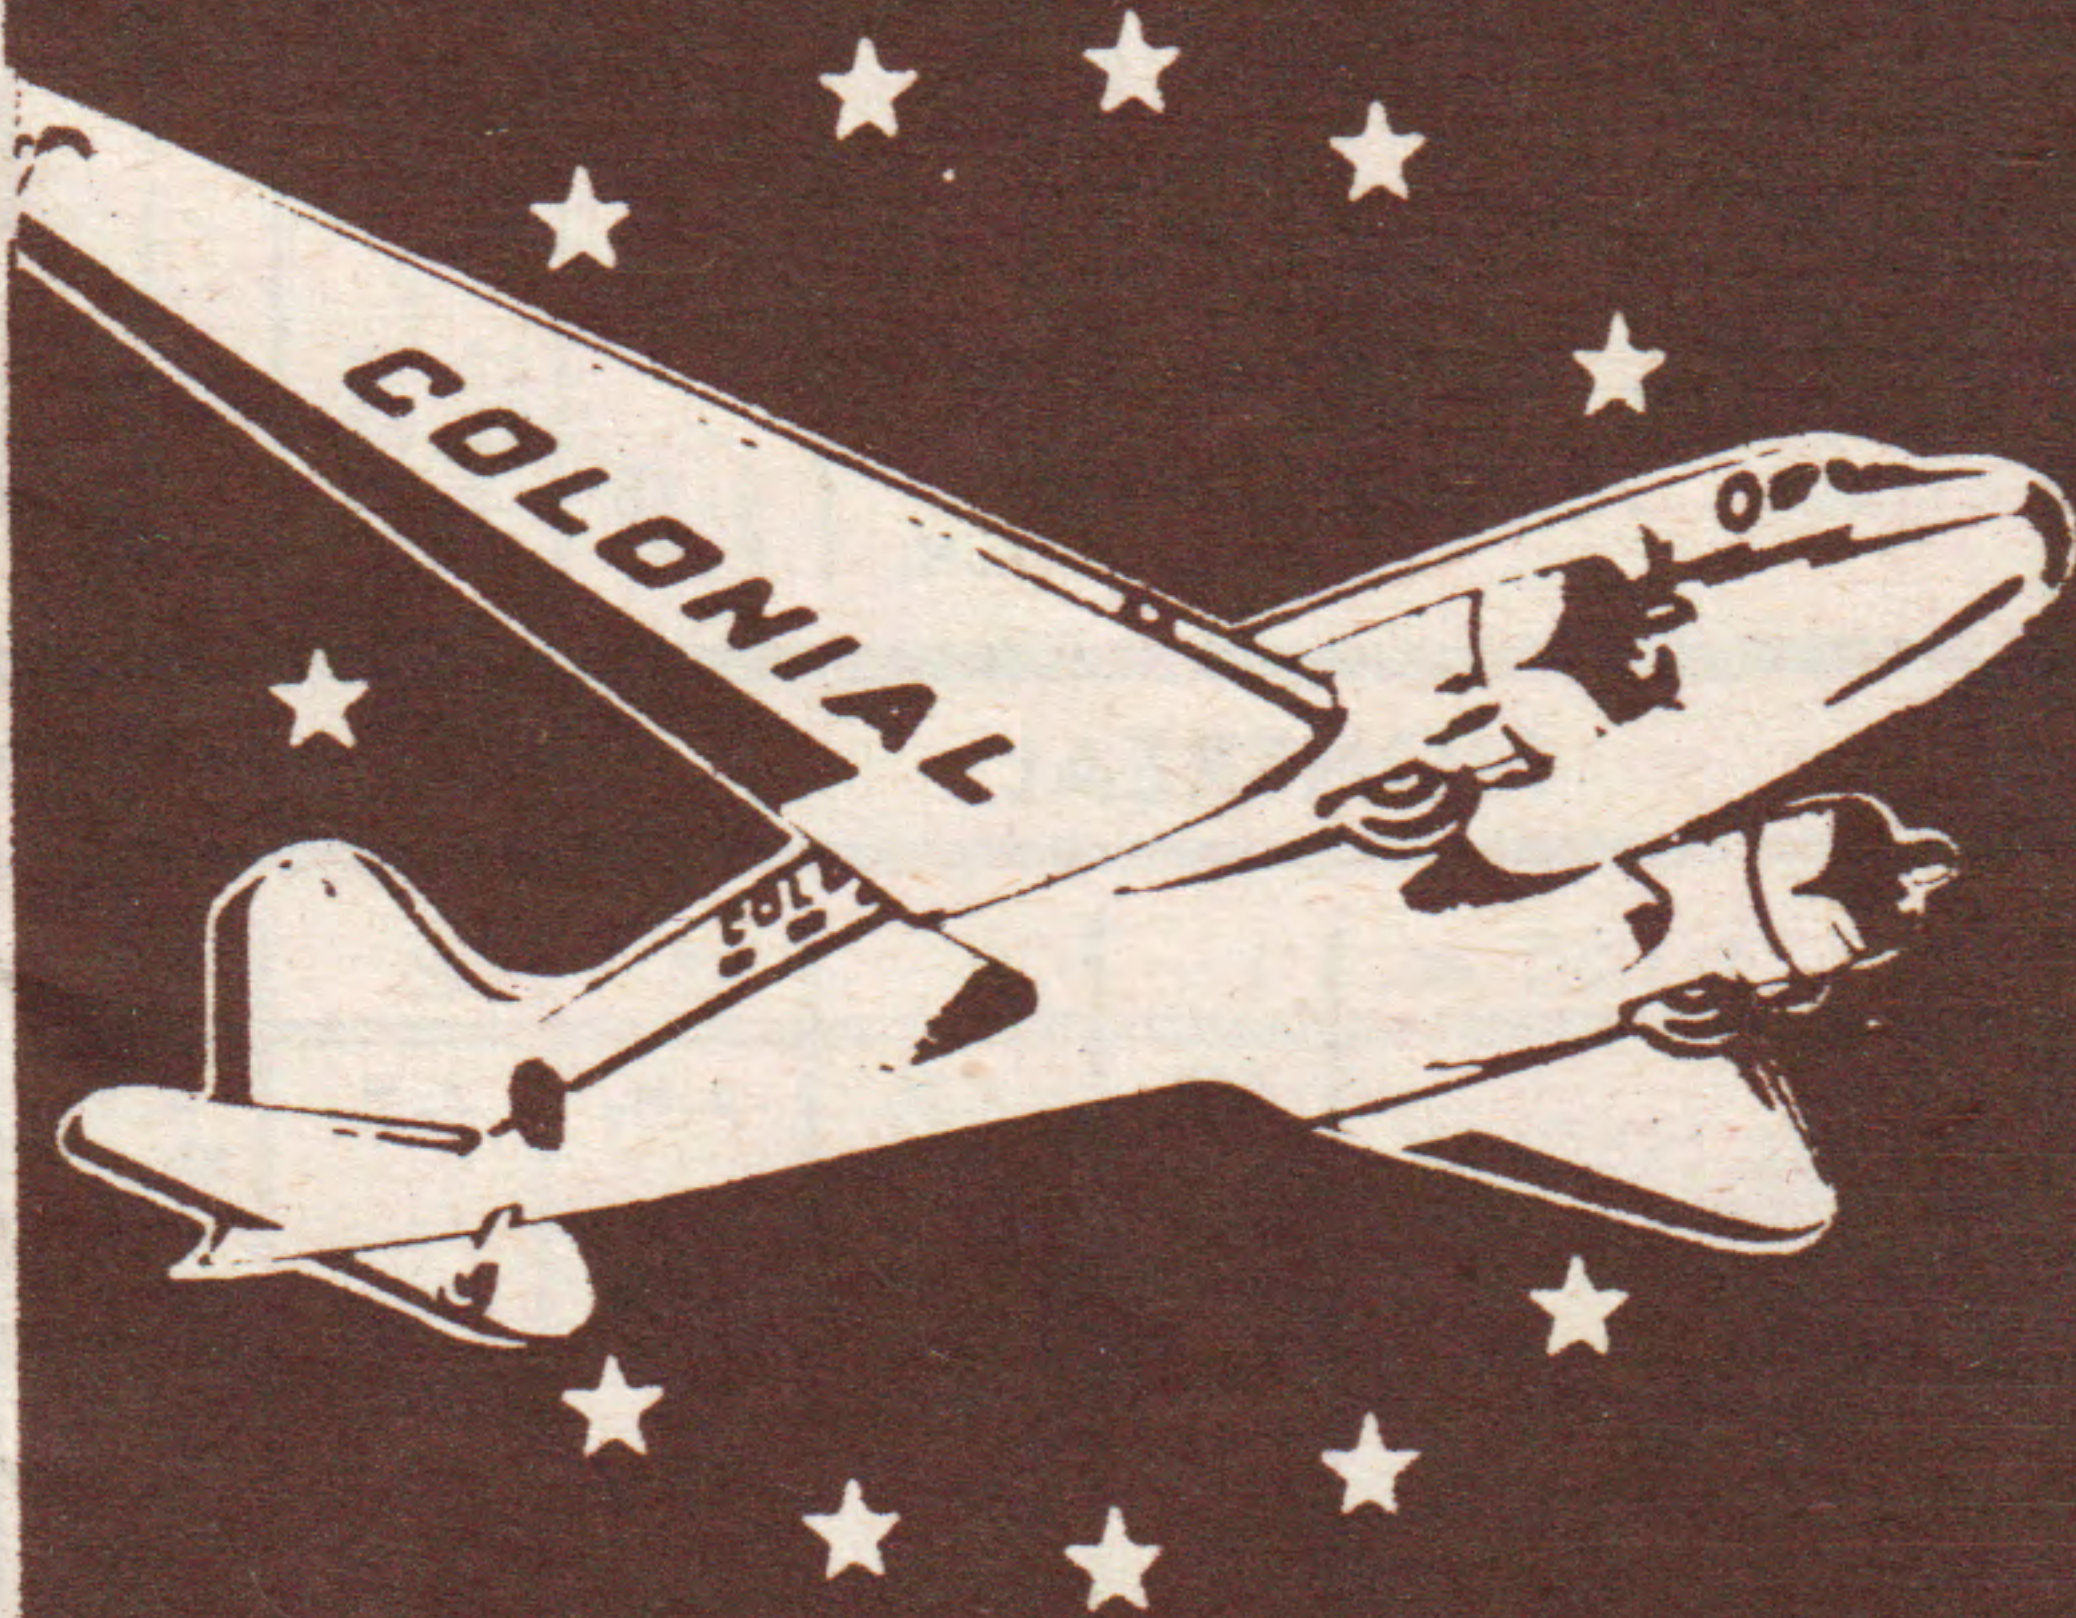

. . . and ten years after the war may boast of handling an estimated 300 aircraft movements during the peak hour each day.

SCHEDULE NOTES

The Douglas DC-4, which pioneered many of the world's skyways as a four-engine commercial transport, has made more Atlantic and Pacific ocean crossings than all other aircraft types combined. During and after the war the DC-4 made more than 85,000 crossings. It has had an unparalleled record in making global air travel fast, dependable and practical. It was just being introduced into service when war broke out. Under auspices of the Air Transport Command and a number of commercial airlines working with the ATC on contract basis, the DC-4 was ordered in quantity by the armed services to fly high-priority personnel, cargo, mail and wounded between the United States and bases throughout the world. Thus, flying in four years the normal equivalent of twenty, it received an incomparable "road-testing." During that period the plane was constantly modified and improved to increase its ruggedness and performance. In average service the DC-4 carries 44 passengers at an average speed of 225 miles an hour. Its heating system generates enough warmth to keep an ordinary ten room house comfortable under zero weather conditions. Its passenger list is a "Who's Who" of the world; it has carried many of the world's leading diplomats and government and military leaders. During the war it evacuated 50,000 wounded a month from the combat theaters. It carried almost every ounce of V-Mail transported between the U. S. and its far-flung troops.
